THE EUCHARIST AS HOLY COMMUNION

What should I do after I receive?

Taking time for prayer and thanksgiving after receiving Holy Communion is so important. We should want to rest with our Lord dwelling within in us in these most intimate moments after Holy Communion. We should thank him for his many blessings, especially the gift of himself in the Eucharist. We should pour out our hearts to him, praising him, telling him we love him, presenting our needs to him, and interceding for others. We should take time quietly to listen to Jesus.

When we come back to our pews after receiving Holy Communion, this is not the time to look around and see who's at Mass. This is not the time to develop your parking lot exit strategy or ponder the coffee and donuts. This is a time to rest with our Beloved Jesus. This is why the tradition of taking time for prayer and thanksgiving after Communion is so important. Even after Mass is finished, we don't need to rush out the door. We can spend a few minutes with our Lord in prayer. If we don't take time to talk to Jesus and listen to him while he's dwelling within us after Holy Communion, when will we ever really take time to do this?

AMEN GENEROSITY

Meant to be sent.

“As you sent me into the world, so I sent them into the world.” We are meant to be sent - stewards of our mission alongside every other member of the Church. What does this look like? It looks like the love that Jesus embodied, and that we must embody as his missionary disciples - humble, holy, sacrificially poured out. This “agape” love is defined by being radically given. It is completely selfless, free, faithful, and joyful. Our prime mission territory is where we live, work and play. It begins with our family and neighbors. This is how we are stewards of our mission as the Body of Christ. You and I are meant to be sent.
