Gospel Reflection from the Seasonal Missalette

August 10

19th Sunday in Ordinary Time

"In God we trust." What do you think of when you hear that phrase? Probably money, since that sentence appears on all U.S. currency. Appropriate, seemingly, for it is money in which we often place the most trust. It can provide for our material needs and give us peace of mind for the future, much as the rich man in last Sunday's Gospel or Jesus' disciples in today's believed it would. But Jesus tells them no, their true treasure is in heaven, inexhaustible and imperishable. They only need trust in God. The authors of both Wisdom and Hebrews recall the trust their forebears had in God, to deliver them out of slavery, to provide descendants as numerous as the stars. Their powerful faith, which led Abraham to believe that God must even have the power to raise the dead when he was asked to sacrifice Isaac, was now needed by Luke's audience, for they had begun to doubt that Jesus would return as he had promised. Even now, after two thousand years, the master in Jesus' parable has yet to return. So we are challenged to keep the faith as well, to seek our treasure in the kingdom of heaven and not the kingdom of wealth, and to acclaim truly, "In God we trust." How do you show your trust in God?
